

Hall of Fame Inductees

Dennis Dudek

is being inducted into the Defense Logistics Agency Troop Support Hall of Fame this fifth day of November for his outstanding mission support from 1977 through 2009. Mr. Dudek was an outstanding logistician whose vision and willingness to explore new and better ways of doing business brought change and improved practices, as well as numerous accolades to DLA Troop Support and the entire Defense Logistics Agency. Although he spent most of his career in Clothing and Textiles, he also served as the director of the Business Systems Modernization Office and the Electronic Commerce Office. Many of the improvements implemented during his career remain as DLA Troop Support standard business practices. Mr. Dudek empowered his employees, provided them with ample educational opportunities and set goals, allowing his employees to find ways to meet them. As a result of his leadership, his commodity business unit was recognized as the standard for the agency. Implementing Army Direct Ordering, with deliveries of items to the foxhole in as little as 11 days, earned the agency the Supply Chain Operational Excellence Award for all of the Department of Defense in 2005. Mr. Dudek also earned multiple awards for his support and work with the Ability One program. His dedication during his tenure at DLA Troop Support set him apart from his peers. We have, and will continue to, benefit from the contributions and leadership of Mr. Dudek.
