a. Employees, or their representatives, may make a written or oral RA request to their first-line supervisor, DPC, or any management official in their chain of command. If an employee first makes the request to a member other than the DPC, that official must immediately tell the DPC.

b. Management Officials must collaborate with DPCs and provide acknowledgment to the employee. The DPC must then provide notice of rights and responsibilities to the employee and the Decision Maker (DM). Once completed, the DPC must manage the electronic case file in the agency's RA system.

c. Applicants must request RAs according to instructions outlined in each job announcement. After the assigned HR specialist receives a request, they must respond to the request, and collaborate with their DPC.

2. DECISION PHASE:

a. Employee. A request for an RA begins with an interactive and flexible collaboration between the employee and supervisor to identify an effective accommodation.

b. The interactive process may include:

(2) Talking with the employee to discover:

(a) The precise job-related limitations imposed by the individual's disability, and;

(b) The accommodations that could overcome those limitations.

(3) An identification of potential accommodations and, with the employee's help, an assessment of the effectiveness of those accommodations in enabling the employee to perform the essential functions of the job.

(4) The accommodation will effectively address the employee's needs but may not necessarily be the exact accommodation the employee requested.

(5) The DM may request through the DPC medical documentation outlining the employee's functional limitations to make an effective evaluation of the employee's request. The DPC must provide the employee with a medical documentation form for the employee's doctor to complete and return.

(6) The DM must seek advice from the DPC and when necessary, from General Counsel, Human Resources, and other specialists to evaluate the employee's request. Management officials must not provide PII or other sensitive information to parties who don't need it to approve or deny the request. The DM must record all approvals on DLA Form 1887-2 while confirming all denials on DLA Form 1887-1.

(7) The agency's goal is to decide on all employee RA requests within 45 days. If a request for medical documentation exceeds that limit, each MSC EEO office may elect to either extend or close the current request until the employee provides medical documentation. If an interim accommodation can be temporarily provided while the individual requests medical documentation, the DM must evaluate and provide the interim accommodation. Processing and completing applicant requests for accommodation should be 5 days, or the closing date of the Job Announcement, whichever is earlier.

(8) Employees dissatisfied with a decision on their RA request, may contact their local EEO office to obtain information about their rights.

3. IMPLEMENTATION PHASE:

(1) Making workspaces accessible.

(2) Buying furniture, equipment, and obtaining services like sign language interpreters.

4. SUSTAINMENT PHASE: The agency and employees are responsible for asking for equipment or software accommodation upgrades or replacements, according to agency policy. J6 must identify an alternative means of providing software accommodations in instances when CAP services are not available.
